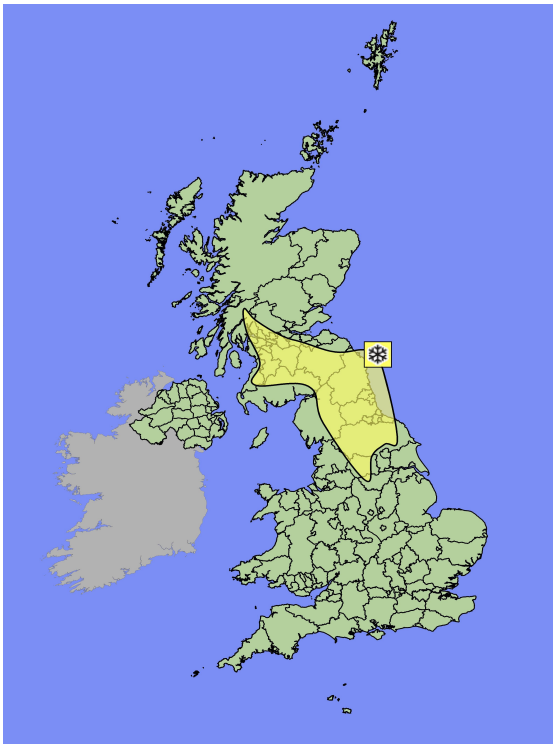
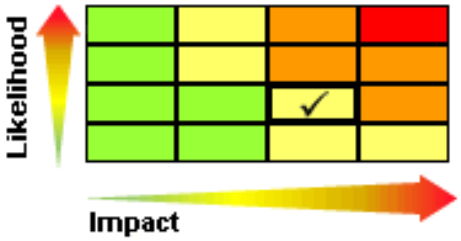
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold front coming south will bring rain, turning to snow in places as it falls into cold, undercutting air of arctic origin on its rearward side. At this stage there is some uncertainty about both timing and intensity of the front. With a lot heat input into roads over the last couple of weeks, it is expected to settle much more readily on vegetated surfaces than on roads.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Snow

Valid from 00:05 on Tue, 03rd Apr 2012 until 11:00 on Tue, 03rd Apr 2012

Rain spreading southwards on Monday night and into Tuesday will turn increasingly to snow which will settle mainly on hills above about 200 m. Here accumulations of 5 cm or so are expected in places, whilst a mixture of rain, sleet or snow at lower levels brings the risk of some temporary slushy accumulations. The public are advised to be aware of the risk of some disruption to transport.
